

FOUR LEFT IN CASTLE TROPHY TENNIS EVENT

TODAY'S MATCHES.
At Beretania, 4:15—Davis vs. Hoogs; Warren vs. Barnes.
YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Davis beat Baldwin, 1-6, 6-4, 10-8;
W. Hoogs beat Graham, 6-2, 6-1; Warren beat Ricker, 2-6, 6-0, 6-1; Barnes beat Guard, 7-5, 6-2.

The semi-finals of the Castle cup tennis tournament will be played this afternoon at the Beretania courts, and it's an open question as to which two will survive, as the handicaps are well arranged to bring the contestants on level terms.

A. S. Davis and W. H. Hoogs meet in the upper half of the draw, while W. L. Warren and K. B. Barnes come together in the lower. In the first mentioned match, Hoogs, who is Class B, owns 30 every game to Davis, Class D. Hoogs has been playing rattling good tennis all week but the handicap is a heavy one, and a fall-down will mean defeat. Warren owes 15 to Barnes, and on form should be able to do this and get away with the match.

If Hoogs and Warren get through today, and meet in the finals, a splendid match should result, as both men have shown brilliant tennis during the early rounds.

LITTLE CHANCE THAT KEIO TEAM WILL PLAY HERE

The Keio baseball players are anxious to make a stop-over in Honolulu, on their way back to Japan, and try conclusions with the local teams, but it now looks extremely doubtful whether such a plan can be carried out. As published in the Star-Bulletin several days ago, the Keios go to the states by the northern route, leaving Japan in the Empress of Russia tomorrow. The team works its way southward, and sails from San Francisco on the Manchuria May 19. It was stated in a letter from Japan, received here a few days ago, that the Keio students had to be home by June 10. If that is so, they will not have much time to play in Honolulu.

A. L. Castle yesterday received a brief note stating that the Keios would like to play here, and asking the Oahu league to make a proposition, and forward it to Graduate Manager Wilcox of Stanford, who is looking out for the business interests of the Keios on the Coast. The league will probably have to turn the proposition down, however, for extensive repairs and alterations are to be made at Athletic Park, and this work will not be finished until some time in June.

EMPIRE THEATER

More as a spectacle than an intricate drama, the special feature film, "The Pearls of Greece," is a picture that has been enacted for the pathos contained in it. The offering at the Empire theater for this afternoon and evening includes a wide and pleasing selection of subjects.

"Jack's Chrysanthemum" is an effort from one of the best producing companies on the mainland. It is a drama, strong in plot and is destined to hold the interest of the spectator to the last. The picture, "Faith of a Girl," tells a pretty little story in which a delightful romance is unfolded.

As a comedy, "In the Diplomatic Circle," it is believed, will please. The management announces the introduction of daily educational films and for today offers a picture having its setting in Far Cathay, and entitled "The Burial of a Wealthy Chinese." Friday's program will introduce the regular weekly pictorial resume of world happenings. Both dramatic and comic films will be presented.

NEWS THAT'S COMMENT THAT'S NEWS

TWO HONOLULANS ON ALL-COLLEGE WATER POLO TEAM

Two Honolulu boys now at Yale have been picked for signal athletic honors, and once more Hawaii is in the spotlight. An All-Collegiate water polo team has been picked by an eastern expert, and out of the six men, two are from this city. They are H. Steiner, and Harry von Holt, and both get a big send-off in the Yale News.

Both men are known here as strong swimmers, and the fact that they excel at water polo is no great surprise to their friends, but to be rated as among the six best collegiate players in the country is something out of the ordinary. Steiner is a member of the Hui Nalu, and lives right on the beach. Von Holt is the son of H. M. von Holt.

L. de B. Handley, the well known authority on aquatic sport, who picks the team, has the following to say of the two Hawaiian representatives.

"Steiner and Maracy, on the other hand, were reliable and efficient from start to finish. Steiner, in spite of his light weight, pierced every back-field and often fought his way to the board against overwhelming odds. Seventy points he tallied for Yale and his grit and imperviousness to punishment were frequently a matter of comment."

"Butler, von Holt and Shryock, all three exhibited speed, tackling ability, aggressiveness and fine knowledge of water polo. One hates to eliminate any one of them. In the final analysis, however, wisdom prompts the choice of Butler and von Holt, for Shryock has one fault, an inclination to commit technical fouls which call for penalties likely to prove the deciding factor in a very close match."

GOLF GOSSIP

Here is an article on the upkeep of a golf course, by J. W. Mayall, who needs no introduction now to the American public. He has long been recognized as one of the greatest authorities in Great Britain on this subject. This one came out in the World of Golf lately and will certainly prove of interest to committees:

The greenkeeper who is desirous of adding to his knowledge respecting the improvement and maintenance of his course may acquire a good deal of valuable information if he is able to set aside a plot of turf for experimental purposes. Such a plot may be formed by seeding, or it may be worked up out of the ordinary turf of the course. It is essential that it should be situated on soil similar in nature to that on which the putting greens are placed, and if they have been formed out of the existing turf then the experimental ground must follow on the same lines.

This plot should receive the same treatment as the putting greens, in the shape of regular cutting and rolling, even then it will lack the daily traffic of the players' feet, an important factor in estimating the wear and tear of various grasses. Here, the greenkeeper may test the numerous samples of fertilizers that the firms seeking trade from golf clubs send round. Personally, we are not in favor of using artificial manures in large quantities simply on the glowing recommendation of a capable traveler, or a rosiest worded circular, and where a suitable plot is reserved for testing purposes much useful knowledge may be gained.

To be of real service it is important that such experiments should be carried out in a proper and methodical manner. A memorandum book, with suitable columns and headings, should be obtained. In this may be entered the date when the turf is treated, the name of the fertilizer, its composition, quantity required per square yard, price, and finally the result, adding such notes as may come up—abnormal weather conditions for instance.

It is necessary to utter a word of warning to the inexperienced in these matters. For instance, too much importance must not be paid to a fertilizer that produces immediate results in the form of thick and rapid growth. Such a manure may easily be of too forcing a nature, causing the stronger grasses to flourish at the expense of the finer varieties. On the other hand a dressing that is only productive of slow progress may show excellent results later by encouraging the dwarf grasses so necessary for the formation of the perfect green.

This experimental work becomes doubly interesting to the man who has a real love for his work, when he carries out tests with dressings of his own manufacture. Having acquired some knowledge of the chemistry of soils and manures, he may mix composts of various kinds and test them side by side on his experimental ground. In this manner he may discover by practical experience the dressings that suit his turf best.

An additional plot that enables one to carry out valuable tests in another direction is the one usually maintained as a turf nursery, from which the bare parts in the greens may be repaired when necessary. Such a plot is usually formed from seed, and it affords one an opportunity of giving a trial to the various mixtures offered

1. King GEORGE 2. Ambassador PAGE

BASEBALL AS SHE IS WROTE IN THAT DEAR OLD ENGLAND

The London daily newspapers, describing the big "match" between the Giants and White Sox, which the king attended, all say that baseball will never supplant cricket in England. It is nothing but "glorified rounders"—an old village game—they say. The side in the field, according to the British notion, has all the better of it. But this "match" was enjoyed thoroughly, as witness some of these naive quotations from the Daily Telegraph:

"A very pretty effect was produced as all four bases were connected by racing blue-clad forms." (This was a homer by a Chicago man, with the bags full.)

"Excitement was worked up . . . when at the end of the allotted nine innings apiece the score remained two runs, or 'scratch' all, as an American had it."

It seems that "a rare punch from Lobert" was a matter of note; also "a huge stroke" from Daly of the Sox, these both being home runs.

The enterprising Daily Express, however, bent all its rivals by having the game written in "American slang" by "an American reporter." Here are some extracts from that gem.

"Once or twice Faber and Benz, the pitchers, hurled some good stuff which made the crowd think, but mostly they kept to the good straight shots, neither "Lobert smacked a ball right across the diamond and made such a bully song of it that it plumped clean among the crowd."

"Some of the batters fanned the ball more times than I fancied." "When a batter fans the ball four times running and has to leave it without a whack at it, it makes you feel some sad."

"People seemed to be surprised when some of the batters used the southpaw and were ever more struck when some of the southpaw men got in some good slogs."

"Lee Magee gave the Giants a hitch-up by doing stunts in left field."

"The shortstop buttered the ball."

This special article carried a diagram explaining the "American slang." It seems that "hitch-up" means assistance, "battered" means fumbled, "some" means a good deal.

The Baseball Writers' Association of America, however, would like to know what was the matter with Umpire Bill Klem (described in one of the articles as "Mr. William Klein") when he let a batter fan the ball four times running. The association rejoices, though, that those who used the southpaw at bat got in some good slogs. Also it would like to have the name of the "American reporter," so it might sign him up before the Federals get him.

details as to soil, situation, etc., should be forwarded with the order. Although some committees may raise an objection to the additional time and labor required for these experimental purposes, we think the valuable knowledge gained at first hand will constitute a practical return of any expenditure involved.

CHINESE TEAM SURPRISE TO CALIFORNIANS

The All-Chinese ball team made quite a hit in Southern California, to judge by newspaper accounts and publicity.

The following is from the Los Angeles Times:

Occidental, 4; Chinese, 5.
Nine little Chinamen, with slender, delicate hands and a highly cultivated scorn for the umpire, walloped the baseball team of Occidental College yesterday, thus making it apparent that baseball follows the flag and that the lowly ump has no better reputation in the far islands of the sea than here at home.

To hear these Chinese college students from Hawaii roasting the umpire with deadly sarcasm was almost as interesting as the ball game.

When one of them came back to the players' bench after a few moments' acute discussion with the gentleman with the indicator and said, "Well, for the love of Mike, did you ever see anything to beat that guy?" there were those who felt that Kipling was proved to be mistaken and that the East and West had at last met.

During the game, the Occidental catcher attempted to play a little trick upon these unsophisticated sons of the Flowery Kingdom by hiding the ball.

As he tucked it out of sight, little En Sue, the Ty Cobb of the South Seas, rose from his place at the coaching line and said with contempt, "I thought that we were going to learn something about baseball by coming across the Pacific Ocean. I didn't expect to see any one try to pull a bush league trick at least a century old." Whereupon Occidental felt itself properly squelched.

The game was attended by about 200 fans, about half of whom were admiring Chinese, who gave the team a big banquet in Chinatown last night. Although the China boys won, it was no cinch victory.

Duke Walk and Ball pitched for Occidental. A little fellow named Ake, who is a recruit with the Chinese team, began and a half-caste Chinese named Foster Hueng finished the game.

Ako blew up in the third. The little third baseman—Chen—began the disaster with an overthrow of first and they began slamming him all over the lot. Before they could get him out, the Occidental boys had landed on him for four runs.

Foster Hueng, the big half-caste who followed, held the college boys down tight. Once they got men on second and third, but Foster signaled the fielders to come in and struck out the batter who faced him.

The Chinese scored on Walk in the third and twice in the sixth. The score was tied in the seventh on a passed ball. By the mighty stick of Kan Yen, who slammed a long liner into center field and never stopped going, the Chinese scored twice in the eighth and won the game.

One of the features of the game was the base running of En Sue, the Ty Cobb of the islands, who has a record of 10 flat and who runs with the speed of an I.W.W. who smells beer.

The Chinese boys leave this morning for Yuma.

The score:
Chinese, 6; hits, 7; errors 1.
Occidental, 4; hits, 8; errors, 4.

PUNAHOU PREPARATORY STUDENTS EXHIBITING HANDIWORK FOR 2 DAYS

As has been the custom for the last three years the pupils of the eighth grade of the Punahou Preparatory are holding an exhibit in the school building. Each boy and girl in the class is requested to put on exhibition something which he or she has made during the past year, there being no rule as to what should be brought except that it be something made by the student.

In the past years the exhibits have ranged from miniature lighthouses to cakes and the assortment of articles exhibited has made the show a feature of the school year. Since the present eighth grade is the largest class that the school has ever had the variety of the exhibits of the students will be greater than ever.

The exhibition rooms will be opened for inspection today and tomorrow and all friends of the school are cordially invited to come.

planade of the Marina at the exposition grounds is under way. The Esplanade will be an artistically decorated promenade skirting the water's edge and the parapet will serve the double purpose of a bulkhead and a decorative feature. This parapet will be 2000 feet long and three feet high. It will be ornamented with pedestals and illuminated in a novel manner.

Four of the largest tourist companies in the United States have been appointed tour agents of the Panama-Pacific international exposition and are busily engaged forming tourist parties to San Francisco during the exposition. One company alone already has 25,000 people signed up to attend the exposition.
